COMMENT

During November, the markets were influenced by the rising Covid-19 cases in Europe and the new variant of the virus – omicron. The main indexes started the month in the green but at the end they incurred losses. In the USA, the inflation hit 6.2% on an annual basis for October. Though, November showed signs for a strong labor market as the initial jobless claims for the month fell to 199 000, which is the lowest since 1969. The Chairman of the Federal Reserve was reappointed for another four year mandate and soon after that he announced that the central bank's intentions to accelerate the reduction of its bond buying program.

The leading world indexes finished the month mostly in the red – Dow Jones and S&P 500 fell by -3.73% and -0.83%, respectively. In Europe, the German benchmark DAX also fell by -3.75%, while the British one – FTSE 100 fell by -2.46%. In Asia, the indexes dropped sharply. NIKKEI was in the red and fell by -3.71%, while Hang Seng fell deeply by -7.49%. The Bulgarian benchmark Sofix rose sharply by 6.64% despite the underperformance of the indexes in developed countries.

News of the month: According to NSI data in November 2021 r. the overall business climate indicator dropped by 2.2 percentage points compared to the previous month. The consumer price index for November 2021 compared to October 2021, measuring monthly inflation is 1.8%. The annual inflation for November 2021 compared to November 2020 is 6%.
